Mind vs. Matter

In one constituency a heckler drew disparaging attention to the candidate's lack of inches. "What's the good of a little chap like you?" said he. "It's a man we want to represent us." "Ah," said the candidate, quietly, "Where I come from we measure a man from his chin up. You evidently measure him from the chin down!"

Some diners in America were discussing the merits of different kinds of gamebirds. One preferred wild duck, another woodcock, and still another thought a quail the most delicious article of food. The discussion and the dinner ended at about the same time.

"Now," said one of the company to the colored waiter, "what kind of game do you like best?"
"Well, sir, I tell the truth," replied the negro, "almost any kind of bird suits me, but what I like best is an American eagle served on a silver dollar."

Some Difference
A long-winded, proxy counsellor was raising a technical case recently before one of the judges of the superior court. He had drifted along in such a dilatory way that it was hard to keep track of what he was trying to present, and the judge had just vented a very suggestive yawn.
"I sincerely trust that I am not unduly trespassing on the time of this court," said the lawyer, with a suggestion of sarcasm in his voice.
"There is some difference," the judge quietly observed, "between trespassing on time and encroaching on eternity."

IT'S THE TALK OF THE COUNTRY SIDE

HOW DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED MRS. SAMUEL THOMPSON'S DROPSY

Her's was a Terrible Case and the Water Was Powerless to Check it, but the Great Kidney Remedy Cured it.

Holt, Ont. (Special).—All the country side about here is talking of the wonderful cure of Mrs. Samuel Thompson of this place. She was taken sick with laundries, and though the doctor was called in she grew steadily worse. Her stomach was so bad she could not keep anything on it. Dropsy set in and she bloated to a terrible size. The doctor came three times to tap her, but her husband would not allow him to do it, saying that if she could not get better they might let her die in peace. Finally she dropped the doctors and tried other medicines, but they did her no good. Her husband and the water strained from it. Then someone told her about Dodd's Kidney Pills and she asked her husband to get her a box.

After taking them a while she took a bad turn. Nothing would come up in her throat and she would vomit. The water would just fly from her mouth. But from that time she commenced to get better, and to-day she is a well woman. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

After the Deceit
Dakota Judge to man who had lost the case—Well, what are your plans for the future, sir?
Man grinned—I think I'll stop marrying and settle down.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

If you are deaf, as the expert says, the deaf portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional means. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, it has a tendency to close, and when it is closed, the air is excluded from the middle ear, and the hearing is lost. The tube is inflamed by a running nose or by a cold in the head, and when it is inflamed, it is necessary to take out the tube and restore it to its normal condition. This can be done by the use of the Eustachian Tube Dilator, which is a small, delicate instrument, and is used by the doctor to dilate the tube and restore it to its normal condition. The Eustachian Tube Dilator is used by the doctor to dilate the tube and restore it to its normal condition. The Eustachian Tube Dilator is used by the doctor to dilate the tube and restore it to its normal condition.

"I suffer greatly from indigestion," said the complaining woman.
"So do I," replied her acquaintance.
"Really, I should never have suspected that you were troubled with the American malady."
"Yes. My husband has it."

Another Fish Story

Brown had returned from a fishing expedition, and, after partaking of a most welcome dinner, was relating some of his fishing experiences, says the Buffalo Times.

"Last year," said he, "while fishing for pike, I dropped half a sovereign. I went to the same place this year, and after my line had been cast a few minutes I felt a terrific pull. Eventually I landed a fine pike, which had swallowed the hook, and on cutting it open to release the hook, to my amazement—

"Ah," said his friends, "you found a half-sovereign."
"Oh, no," replied Brown, "I found nine shillings and sixpence in silver and threepence in copper."
"Well, what became of the other threepence in copper?"
"I suppose the pike paid to go through the lock with it," answered Brown.

Relief for the Depressed.—Physical and mental depression usually have their origin in a disordered state of the stomach and liver, as when these organs are deranged in their action the whole system is affected. Try Torquato's Food, which gives the digestive processes, act beneficially on the nerves and restore the system to its normal state. They are cheap, simple and sure, and the effects are lasting.

Plain Talks to Women.

Children's Skin Troubles, Cuts, Etc.

Every healthy child gets them, and every mother has to "put something on." What do YOU put on?

When you put an ointment on to a child's skin it gets into the blood through the pores just as surely as if you put it into the child's stomach. Did you ever think of that? How important, therefore, that the salve or balm should be pure!

Zam-Buk is absolutely pure; contains no animal fat; no mineral coloring matter; no solid antiseptics; no burning antiseptics; yet it is antiseptic! It is purely herbal, and thus meets all the needs of the skin in that superior and all-powerful way in which nature alone provides.

Children like Zam-Buk best because as soon as applied it stops the pain and the smarting of the injury or sore place. Healing then sets in immediately.

CHAPTER XXV.

FAITH LEAVES THE HOME WEST.
As she picked up the key, she was looking at her mother closely and could see that she was troubled.
"Mother," said Faith suddenly, "I don't think people ought to impose onMalcolm ran along the platform and handed up an envelope to Faith.father the way they do. They know he would take everything he has and give it away if we didn't prevent him, and they just impose on his great hearted generosity. And you and the boys have to suffer for it.""Hush, Faith! Your father does what seems to him the wise and Christian thing to do. It is true that everybody in the county comes to him for help. But that is what makes his work what it is. There is no one else they think of that way." Dorothy spoke with the pride of 25 years' companionship with the man of her choice.
She loved him not with deeper, true devotion than she had ever known in her younger days.Faith was silent a moment. "But how can father afford to give money to people? I don't think he ought to." Dorothy did not answer at once."If people need the help of money more than anything else, how else shall we help them? Sympathy and prayers don't seem to be enough in such cases."
"I think father might make Mr.
Barnes a present of a box of soap," said Faith. "I am sure he needs that as much as the $5 he has come to beg for.""They are very poor," sighed Dorothy.
"So are we," replied Faith. "Or we shall be if we always give to everybody."Dorothy did not answer this, and Faith picked up the coat and worked on in silence. She was evidently picking something serious in her mind. It was not the first time she had ventured to remonstrate about the habit her father had of helping all sorts of people. Until a few years past Dorothy had not allowed a thought of the matter to disturb her. Malcolm's salary was very small still. The most rigid economy was necessary to keep the family expenses within the income.
The annual income from his writings now amounted to about $200, but a large part of it was given away, and Dorothy faced increasing difficulty each year in managing the household finances.The door opened, and Malcolm and his visitor came down stairs."I am going out," said Dorothy.
Dorothy. Mrs. Barnes is very sick, and I am going over there. Don't wait dinner for me if I'm not back before half past 12."He kissed his wife and went out.
Faith and her mother watched the tall brawny figure go out of the yard, with the unattractive Barnes following after him. Malcolm was growing gray, but he was "set and vigorous, in his prime, and to these two women watching him out of the window he was the best man in the world.""I'd like to see any one say anything against father!" said Faith decidedly, while an unusual fear came into her eyes. At the same time her mother and herself were wondering how Malcolm ever found time to write his sermons or anything else.Faith stole up to the study and looked at the loose leaves of the sermon on the father's desk. The last words he had written were a quotation"Who can give to the poor lendeth unto the Lord.""Dear old father," said Faith softly.
"I'd better let the Lord shake him.
At the same time we've got to live.
Here I am a woman grown and earning no bread, and the boys want to go to college and mother saving every cent."She went off to her own room that afternoon and locked the door. When Faith brooded, something happened. And it was not altogether a surprise to Dorothy when a few days afterward Faith announced her decision."Mother, I have made up my mind to go away and earn something for the family. I've tried every possible place here, and you know how little I can do."Dorothy looked at the girl gravely, but did not say anything."I have been writing to Grace Holley, who went to Chicago a year ago to learn retouching in Keffen's studio.
She is earning as high as $17 and $18 a week. She says there will be a vacancy at home, and if I apply at once I may get the place. You know I have learned retouching here. All they can teach me, and I like it. Moreover, I can't stand it any longer to remain here at home doing nothing. The boys will soon want to go to college.
I never cared about it. I want to be a photographer or an architect or a paper hanger or something useful. If father can spare enough money to get me started, I can be in a position before the year is out to help the family. We never can break father of his habits of helping everybody, and I want to be self supporting and help the rest too."This was a long speech for Faith to make, but it was the beginning of several family conferences, and the end of it all was that one day in winter of that year Faith and her father went down to the station, and Faith took the express for Chicago. The arrangements had all been completed for her to enter the studio, where she was to receive $8 a week to begin with and promise of rapid increase if the work was satisfactory."Goodby, father. Don't give away your overcoat before you get home, will you?" Faith called out of the window as the train started.Malcolm Kirk smiled and waved his hand. Then he ran along the platform and handed up an envelope to Faith.
She managed to kiss his hand as she took the envelope and then leaned back in her seat and cried.When she opened the envelope, a check for $25 dropped out.
"This is a 'good companion,' my dear. You will find it good company on the road. Your father." This was written hastily in a note with this check. Faith understood it was the price of a story. Malcolm had written that fall. She tucked the check in her purse and cried harder than ever.But when she found herself in Chicago next morning, she set herself resolutely and with courage toward her new life.The work in the studio was extremely interesting to her. Her letters to the people at home were very entertaining and even funny. But after she had been in the city a few months she was obliged to face a serious condition, one that she had not anticipated.In the first place, it cost her nearly every cent of the $8 a week to live.
But economy as she would afford counting out rent and fuel and light, with what her clothes and car fare cost, with everything that must enter into the account of daily existence, she had very little left when Sunday came.One day she realized, with a shock, that she had been obliged to draw on the $25 check. She had used all the money her father had been able to spare. The work in the studio had for several weeks been pleasant, and it happened that business was dull, and several weeks she had been able to earn less than $5.Then came a crisis that she had not counted on. The studio changed hands, and the new proprietor began to cut down expenses and dismiss some of the retouchers. Faith was one of the latest arrivals, and one evening as she came down to the office from the little workshop under the roof she was notified that her services would not be wanted after the next week.She went out of the studio, and instead of taking the car as she usually did, she was obliged to do on foot. And as she walked on she was deeply thinking of what she would do. The idea of writing home for money was so distasteful that she could not bring herself to do it. Her lips closed firmly, and she said to herself: "I never will do it while I can live. I have made a father out of my father, but I can't burden father and mother right now. I know how matters are going at home with all the expense there and Herman's illness last month.
No, no! I started out to be a breadwinner. I must earn my own living."She was suddenly brought to a stop by a crowd that filled up the sidewalk in front of a large window. There was a picture of exhibition there, and Faith, after running in and out of the crowd, seeing what was the object of attention, stopped herself and grad-ually was pushed up to the window as the crowd went and came.It was an oil painting with life-size figures, representing the deck of an ocean steamer. A man was holding a baby in his arms, and the baby was looking up into the man's face and smiling. The title of the picture in gilt letters on the frame was simply "Motherless."It was one of those pictures that appealed to a common humanity, and the crowd on the sidewalk was irresistibly drawn to it. But the effect on Faith was electrical. As soon as she had seen the face of the man on the canvas she exclaimed aloud, "Why, that's father!"Those nearest her looked at her in surprise. She checked herself and was silent. But there before her was the likeness of Malcolm Kirk as she had seen him in the sketch her mother had often shown her. And the story of the baby whose mother had died in midweek was familiar to all the children at home.She looked at the corner of the canvas and saw the artist's name, Francis Raleigh. A card in the window announced the fact that the picture was sold and that the artist's studio was in one of the new blocks on Randolph street.Faith slowly pushed out of the crowd and went on her way. But the picture affected her deeply. The sight of the dear father protecting that motherless baby made her cry. And it alsostrengthened her purpose not to appeal for financial help from home. She could not have told why that feeling accompanied her sight of the picture.
But it did, and she determined that she would make every effort to support herself without help from home.The end of the following week found her without a place, and as she came away from the studio that Saturday evening she realized as never before in her life what it meant to a girl without any friends or a home to face a great city without work or means. She knew that she could go home at any time or get help from that source if she asked for it. But how about the great army of unemployed that had not even that resource? It was a question that came down toward the great artery of the city's human traffic and was sweet to her.She went up by the window where the picture was still on exhibition, and there was the usual crowd in front of it.She stopped again and looked hungrily at it. It was like getting a glimpse of the dear home she had in the passage at Concord.It was perhaps a little strange that she had not contemplated the idea of calling at Raleigh's studio and telling him that she was the daughter of his subject in the picture. But Faith was very shy in some ways, and she simply never thought of trying to meet his artist.

Outdoor sleeping.

Facing any opportunity for sleeping either in the open, suggests Day-pers. But one can have a sleeping bag which enables one to sleep with the head out of doors and the rest of the body indoors.For this one can place the bed with the side against the wall and the head at the window. The canvas hood extends over the head alone, completely cutting off the rest of the body. The window is wide open, leaving the head exposed to the outside air, and there is a curtain to drop from the upper part for protection against storms or winds.Another form of hood permits the bed to stand with the head to the window and the foot out in the room.
With this style of hood the extension bed may be used. The head of this extends out of the window just far enough to allow the head of the sleeper to rest outside. The sack is left open, with a curtain for use in case of storms, and in addition there is a canvas awning which may be raised or lowered.

Women Better Educated.

Professor Edward Thorndike of Columbia university says that men teachers are not so well educated as the women teachers as a general thing.
He notes that men teach any longer than women, either, which contradicts the general idea that women do not make a profession of teaching, while the men do.$25 FOR

I Sell My City of Rome.

All the players sit in a circle. The leader says the first sentence, and the rest repeat it in turn. The leader then adds another, and both are repeated till the whole is complete.
Players who blunder are put out.

The sentences run in this way:

"I sell you my city of Rome. In this city there is a street; in this street there is a house; in this house there is a court; in this court there is a garden; in this garden there is a staircase; at the top of the staircase there is a room; in this room there is a bed; near this bed there is a table; on this table there is a cloth; on this cloth there is a cage; in this cage there is a bird."The bird says, I am in a cage. The cage says, I am on a table. The table says, I am near a bed. The bed says, I am in a room. The room says, I am at the top of the staircase. The staircase says, I am in a garden. The garden says, I am in a court. The court says, I am in a house. The house says, I am in a street and here is my city of Rome."

Genius.

"Why is it," asks a writer in Philadelphia, "that when a man discovers that he is a genius he allows his hair to grow long and that when a woman becomes similarly conscious she has her hair cut short?"The priestess of the temple at Delphi, after the usual incantations, handed out this oracular and mysterious message:"No west bet imago rafco edment oco met of heat dolo hepar ty."

Nobody could translate it.

It was written in a language entirely unknown.Thousands of years afterward, however, an American typewriter salesman found it exceedingly easy, and turned it into a rallying cry that will thrill the hearts of patriots throughout all the coming ages.The shade of Dr. Johnson met the shade of Noah Webster."Hush, Doc," said the latter, and swiftly drew the great lexico-grapher along the chilly hallway.Presently the sound of a violent rumpus reached them. Hoarse voices were raised in shrill debate; a hard gravel fell like a trip hammer on a shuddering desk."What is the solution of this problem?" inquired the big Englishman in his characteristic way.
The unabridged Webster cackled with delight."Those simplified spellers are fighting again," he screamed.Tommy had a habit after going to bed at night of waking his mother and saying to her, "I'm in my crib in another room. One night my father rose and gave him a severe lecture for this."
The following night when Tommy was saving his prayers he interpolated:"Dear Lord, when I talk to mamma tonight, don't let papa interfere."

Neapolis

(Too late for last week's issue.)
Miss Kate Metcalf from Vancouver, B. C., is visiting relatives and friends in the vicinity.

A very interesting programme was given at Berlin by Christian Endeavor. Great interest was manifested in the debate: "Resolved that Pride and Ambition Have Caused More Misery Than Ignorance and Superstition." The decision was for the affirmative.

Mr. Dan Gifford of Olids visited Neapolis friends several days this week.

Mr. Andy Smith stopped in our berg on enough to say "Hello" last Monday.

NEAPOLIS W. C. F. U. NOTES

Our next regular meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Odham Feb. 10 at 2.30 P. M. A report from Moral and Temperance Reform League Convention at Edmonton will be given by the delegate, Mrs. Mary A. White.

Our last meeting was very encouraging. All there present 7, many members and visitors.

Miss Alice Stuart gave us a verbal report of round table talks and addresses on temperance as given at S. S. convention at Edmonton and Carleton Place. "My Temperance Sunday School Teaching," was read and discussed.

The lesson on temperance in Sunday School at the past was optional. At our many moral and temperance lessons in committee, temperance lessons have come to stay and receives nothing but the best co-operation.

On Feb. 25 the union will give a Anand memorial programme. The nature and features of social part, has not yet been decided. But we assure you in advance as good a time as we had at our World tea.

The regular topic for our next meeting will be "Good Literature," ed-y Dept. of that department.

Blooming Prairie News

On sec. 4 the evening of the 20th, Mr. Hartney's stable caught fire from an expiring lantern, burning a valuable team and harnesses, a quantity of hay and oats. There was considerable hay scattered around the hay stack being against the east end of the stable, which was satisfactory load of spruce logs, loaded with hay. One horse badly burned is all that was saved. It is a heavy loss for Mr. Hartney as nothing was insured.

Mr. John Kreil's well is down forty feet now. They have not got through the No. 1 hard wheat soil yet.

Mr. Emery is absent on one of his trips to Didsbury. (Not pleasure trip.) Mr. Turner has the cellar for Mr. Emery's new house nearly finished.

Mr. Wm. B. Smith started housekeeping not long ago.

There is a Reason

Why repeated trips are made from distant points to the Maple Leaf Flour Mills for flour supplies. You need not guess at it. It is because they are satisfied in every way. Unbleached, nutritive, better tasting, are the properties of our Paton Flour. How long could we do business if the flour was not satisfactory? Trade is increasing, which is the best evidence of success. We have Rolled Oats, Rye Flour, etc., everything in the milling line.
